"GOLFING"

Two-reel Century Comedy

Featuring Brownie and Baby Peggy

The head of the family is anxious to learn golf—and so is Baby. Father calls in A. Niblik, expert golfer, and asks for a few lessons at home. The parlor is transformed into a golf course, and father goes to it in his endeavor to wreck the house. Brownie plays the part of a caddy—and he and Baby make every effort to play the game according to rules.

After a few lessons, in which the house becomes the duplicate of a dumping-ground, father goes to a real links with Baby and Brownie. There father shows his prowess as a wonderful misser of golf balls. Baby, tiring of golfing, switches to pool and it is not long before she covers the nineteenth hole, with the aid of Brownie.

While father is still playing golf Baby is kidnapped by a young gypsy, and taken to the gypsy camp. Mother and father, missing their baby, begin looking for her. Brownie, who has endeavored to go to Baby's rescue, has been tied to a pole. Mother and father are told by the gypsies that Baby is down by the river, and they immediately set out to find her. About this time, Brownie gets loose—and digging up the ground around the tent in which Baby is a prisoner, helps Baby to a nearby horse. Brownie puts a ladder against the horse, helps Baby up and follows after her. He leads the horse to mother and father—and the happy family is again united, thanks to Brownie.
